

COMMITMENT TO A MORAL BUDGET

We, as religious leaders and people of faith, express our commitment to the values of our sacred texts and their concern for economic justice and the common good. A moral budget, whether city, state or national, reflects these values. Therefore, we commit ourselves to act in support of Moral Budgets which:

- Protects the weak; including the poor and sick, the old and very young;
- Protects our safety from crime, unemployment and accidents due to inadequate funding of public infrastructure;
- Protects families from risks they cannot endure alone, and spreads the costs of such risks among the larger community
- Provides open and accessible participation by all people;
- Secures adequate revenue and expenditures so the community can pay for quality services and basic needs such as healthcare and a living wage

SIGNATURE

PRINTED NAME

EMAIL

PHONE

Yes, I want email updates from the Interfaith Council on Economics & Justice.

Yes, I want to know more about moral, public budgeting and would like to be invited to a Budget 101 training or event.

I prefer to receive communication in:

English

Spanish

Vietnamese

Other